TRANSPORT WARREN STILL IN PORT

Iron Works Said to Have Refused Job on Boilers—Two Barrels of Salt in One.

The transport Warren did not depart yesterday as given out from the ship on Tuesday night. It is reported that she will surely get away today, but nothing definite could be ascertained.

It was learned, however, from reliable sources that the Warren is not likely to sail for several days yet, even if she ever does get away from this port at all. While nothing in the shape of confirmation could be obtained yesterday, it was very generally rumored along the waterfront that the Honolulu Iron Works, which had been engaged to repair the Warren's boilers had, after a thorough inspection, decided to have nothing more to do with the job. It is said that Cotton, Neill & Co. were then engaged, and are putting angle irons into the damaged boilers. It is understood that two barrels of salt were found in one of the transport's boilers. This must either have been put in intentionally, or its presence is due to gross neglect on the part of the engineer's department of the vessel. All the troops slept on board the Warren last night.

The Aorangi sailed for Vancouver and Victoria at 4 p. m. yesterday.

Capt. J. F. James will, it is said, embark in the fishing industry in the near future.

The Hyades will leave Kahuku for San Francisco next Saturday, and will leave the coast for Honolulu on April 5th.

The navy coller Alexander will probably sail for Norfolk, Va., today. Her cylinders were being repaired yesterday.

Among the Aorangi's passengers were Major Colonel G. A. French, a brother of the famous British general, and Dr. McInnes, former governor of the Province of British Columbia.
